

Central School Update

It is with great pride that the Central School is now in its permanent home at the Mount Prospect Historical Society museum campus. However, the hard work involved to complete the project and open the School to the public is far from completed. The society is currently involved in a number of projects relating to fundraising and restoration. The “laundry list” of requirements to open the school is lengthy and includes demolition, roofing, carpentry, painting, as well as complete replacement of HVAC, plumbing, framing, and electrical. To support the cost of these projects, the Society completed a village-wide mailing in July. The generous donations from this mailing continue to stream in, and any prospective donors are encouraged to make a contribution. The society is also pursuing other means of fundraising including grants, corporate contributions, and contractor and material donations. The drive to again restore the Central School to a community facility is far from over. Please consider donating to this worthy project today!
